

Are you ready some Jewell to make history?

At William Jewell, history is found in more than just the classroom. From the buildings to the traditions, the Jewell life is rich with history. A history major is the essence of the liberal arts, combining education, expression, and research. Students are challenged to critically consider issues of the past, as they are relevant in the present.

Small class sizes allow for the possibility of independent study and honors projects. Students can also take advantage of one of Jewell's twenty-two overseas studies programs to enhance their knowledge and appreciation of history.

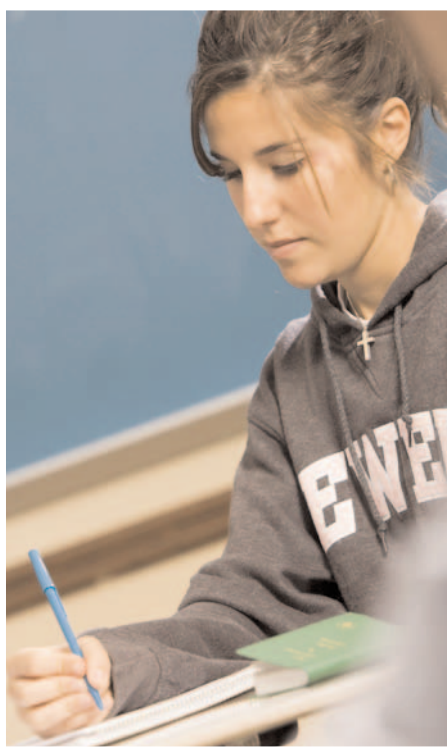

Distinctives

William Jewell's history department has a unique approach to the subject. In the spirit of truly embracing the liberal arts, religious topics and other social issues are integrated into the curriculum. Rather than eliminate these facets from the courses, students are expected to give them appropriate attention, respect, and criticism.

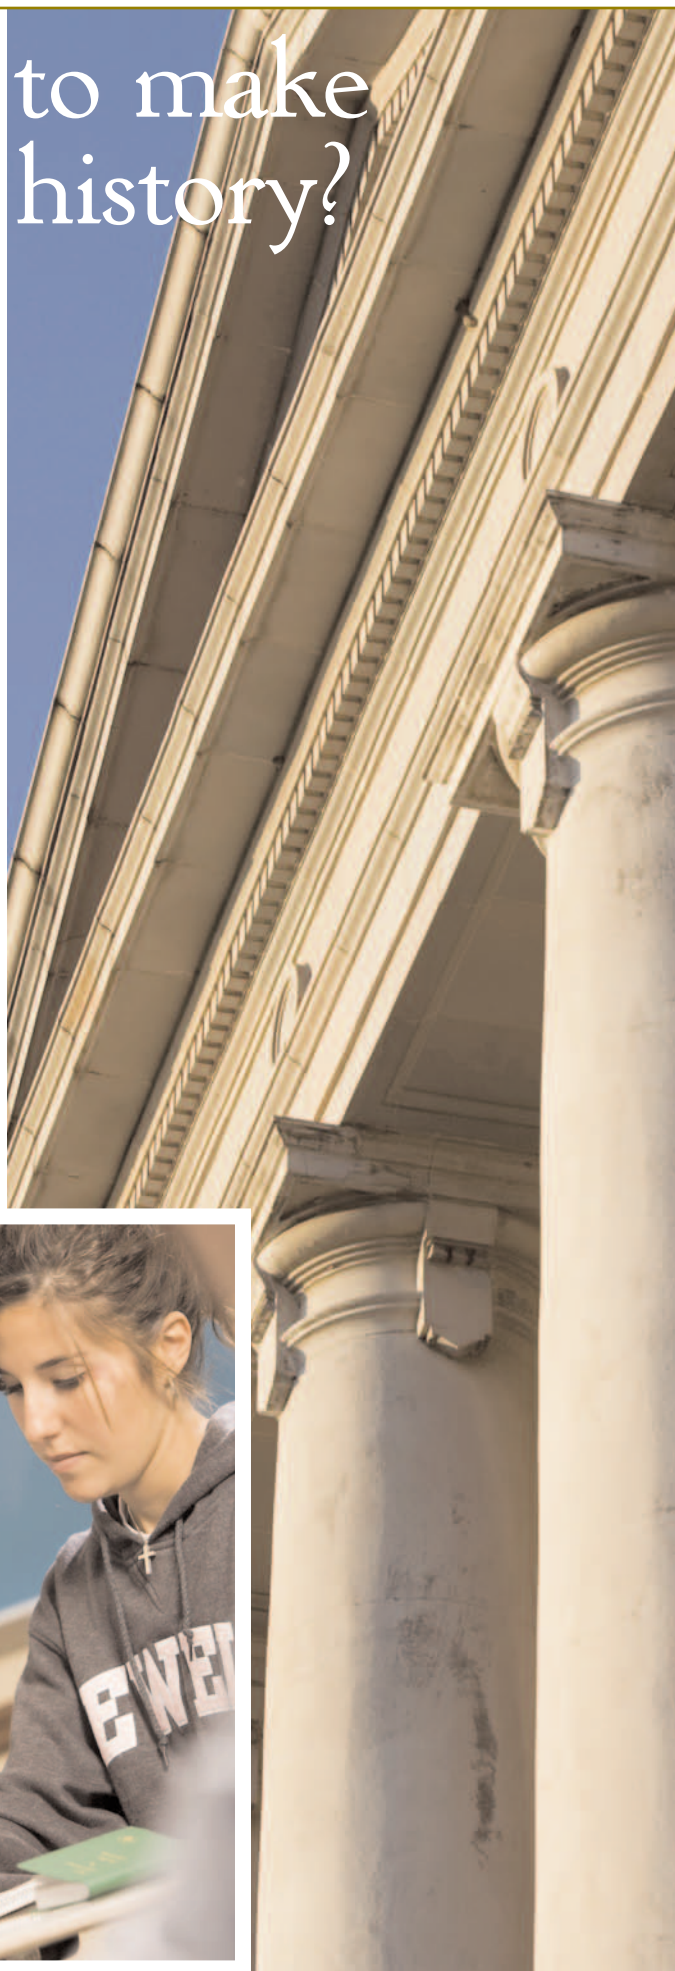

A history major will do more than simply prepare you for a career—it will give you a solid foundation of research, critical thinking, and analytical learning. Here are some of the things you can do with your major, in and beyond the classroom:

- A great deal of attention is given to developing and refining student writing;
- Get connected with local museums, historical sites, and historical depositories to fit your interests and your needs. Internships provide the practical learning experience to outfit you for your future career in the history field;

(see back panel)

History

DEGREE PROGRAMS OFFERED:

Bachelor of Arts

HISTORY FACULTY

R. Thomas Howell, Ph.D.
Department Chair & Professor

Elaine A. Reynolds, Ph.D.
Professor

Frederick M. Spletstoser, Ph.D.
Professor

- Take advantage of the many historical stories that can be found on campus—figure out why Jewell Hall's bricks make it a historical site or how General George Washington is connected to The Hill.
- If you are interested in more than one area of study, the history major is the perfect complement for an additional major or minor.

Are you ready to make some Jewell history? Drop us an email, schedule a visit, or call us toll free (1-888-2-JEWELL).

www.jewell.edu